

The Dynamics of an Intergenerational Nonprofit Environment

- Does your current mission statement reflect the values of your target demographic for volunteers and donors?
- Does your staff/ board/volunteer base accurately reflect the generational make-up of your client base?
- Does intergenerational awareness play a role in financial, technical, and facilities planning within your organization?

The Partnership for Nonprofit Excellence is offering a Brown Bag Lunch surveying the different generations and examining how shifting demographics drive the work of the nonprofit sector. Using a "hands on" group activity, participants will have the opportunity to reflect on what generational influences affect the various aspects of nonprofit management.

The session will be facilitated by HandsOn Coordinator Ellie Burke, who has worked extensively with youth and most recently completed a project through The Community Foundation Serving Richmond and Central Virginia called Meeting in the Middle, focused on engaging Boomers in tutoring and mentoring in middle school settings.

This session is not limited to senior nonprofit staff. We strongly encourage a wide range of ages to participate, to encourage meaningful dialogue.

We ask that you limit registration to no more than 2 staff, board, or volunteer members within your organization (varying generations ideal).
